I'm in need of a bit of glamour and glitz this week to start spring on the right track.

COCO MADEMOISELLE

On counters today is the newest way to wear and carry the classic Chanel fragrance, Coco Mademoiselle. Shimmering

Touch ($130) is a deliciously fresh gel that has fine gold particles in it – the effect on the skin is a subtle glow and the scent is soft, the perfect way to layer if you are a fan of the perfume. Also on counters today is the companion piece, Coco Mademoiselle Parfum Purse Spray ($189). It's packaged in a chic pearlescent white canister with trademark CC logo that's just right for handbags from clutches to totes. From Chanel counters.

CHE SKINCARE

This is a new skin-care brand, designed and developed in Brisbane, that has been garnering a lot of industry buzz. The Che Skincare range is focused on delivering the most powerful anti-ageing goods to skin. The range consists of 16 products, priced under $100 each. Star products are C-Serum 20 and Pura Cleanse 5. The products are free of artificial colours and fragrances and available online at www.cheskincare.com.au or in store at Clinic Aesthetic in the Mater Private Clinic, South Brisbane.

ABSOLUT ROCK

Love the way Swedish vodka brand Absolut comes up with inventive collaborations for their product. The latest is Absolute Rock – a collaboration with rock 'n' roll photographer Danny Clinch and band Wolfmother. The limited edition bottle comes in a leather-studded case (what else?) that will hit shelves next month. To celebrate, Clinch followed Wolfmother around LA during recording, rehearsing and touring and has made a film of his images, which will be part of the visuals for the rock edition pack

BRISBANE SHOE DESIGNERS IN ITALIAN VOGUE

Queensland-based designer shoemakers Jackie Orme Ward and Adrian Lockwood, of Pendragon Shoes, will have their latest collection, To Have and To Hold, featured in the prestigious September issue of Italian Vogue, in a spread that was shot by iconic fashion photographer Steven Meisel. The pair was approached by an assistant to New York stylist Karl Templer to design and make boots for the photo story in this month's Italian Vogue. The footwear was to be teamed with clothes by Vivienne Westwood, Prada and John Galliano for the shoot. Jackie and Adrian rose to the challenge, designing and making nine pairs of men's and women's boots in just one week. "We have never had such a short time frame to design and create a collection. It was like being in a pressure cooker and that was a very effective catalyst for us. I mean you just don't get the opportunity to work at this level and alongside these industry giants every day, it was very exciting."

Jackie said. Their shoes have been worn by actors John Bell, Judy Davis and Geoffrey Rush. The September issue of Italian Vogue is due out any day. View the designs at the website www.pendragonshoes.com.
